

NEW ABSTRACT

An optical disc drive apparatus for writing and/or reading information into and/or from an optical disc includes a controllable motor for rotating a disc. A temperature detector for generate a measuring signal indicating the temperature a laser. A control unit has a first output for generating a control signal for the motor, where the control unit is configured to operate in a fan mode in which the motor is rotated while the laser is switched off.